1st of 8 events in the Einstein's Big Idea program series. Andrew Fraknoi, Chair of Foothill College's Astronomy Department, will explain science concepts in everyday language for non-scientists. Einstein's theories of relativity make wonderfully mind-boggling predictions about star corpses, trick images in space, and space and time itself. When Einstein first published his ideas, few people thought that within a century we would find evidence for them with our telescopes; yet that is precisely what has happened in the last two decades. We will take a non-technical look at some of Einstein's big ideas and show how astronomers are confirming them with space instruments and giant telescopes on Earth. We will particularly look at black holes, strange warps in space and time that turn out to be much more common in space than even Einstein dared to think. Tickets will be required for this program. Free tickets will be available beginning September 14 from the Adult Information Desk. Tickets must be picked up in person, and there will be a maximum of 4 tickets given per person.
